

PROJECT PORTRAIT

De-Stigmatising the Food Queue: Suggestions for a More Inclusive School Meal at Bridgetown High School #168 (2014)

What is this project about?

This project came about through the request of Bridgetown High School (Western Cape). Many of the learners at the school who seem to be in need of an additional meal do not participate in the school's feeding scheme.

A Rapid Research study looked at what causes learners to miss the meals. By looking at experiences in similar programmes elsewhere it came up with suggestions of how this problem may be addressed.

The findings

Learners will avoid activities that label them as 'poor'. This may be avoided if:

- Teachers, as role models in the school, have the school lunch either in class or in the kitchen along with the learners;
- It is called a "lunch programme" rather than a "school feeding scheme";
- The school advertises the lunch programme as a way to create a social bond between learners from different backgrounds and not as pro-poor;
- Parents are informed about the purpose of the meal;
- The menu is culturally appropriate and advertised to learners.

The project was completed in July 2014.

University of Cape

Scholars getting a meal

To reference this Project Portrait, cite UCT Knowledge Co-op as the author. The full report by C. Kondowe & Y. Y. Ilunga is posted on the Co-op website.

Project portraits are licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike license.

Tel: 021 - 650 4415

The Knowledge Co-op at the University of Cape Town

The UCT Knowledge Co-op aims to make it easier for community partners to access UCT's skills, resources and professional expertise. It helps initiate joint projects that benefit both the community partner and the university. The Co-op links community groups with appropriately qualified staff and students at UCT, and supports both partners throughout the project – from initial planning to final product.

know-op@uct.ac.za

www.knowledgeco-op.uct.ac.za

