HONORARY DEGREE

Jennifer Yvonne Mokgoro
LLD (honoris causa)

Yvonne Mokgoro graduated from the University of Bophuthatswana with a BJuris (1982), LLB (1984) and LLM (1987) and from the University of Pennsylvania with a second LLM in 1990.

Justice Mokgoro started her legal career as an academic in 1984, becoming a noted scholar on constitutional law, human rights and gender equality.

Justice Mokgoro was appointed to the Constitutional Court, serving from its inception in 1994 until the end of her 15-year term in 2009. The first black woman on the bench of the Constitutional Court, she is regarded a distinguished member of an illustrious bench. She showed excellent jurisprudence and a deep understanding of vernacular law and its relationship with the Constitution. She participated in writing pioneering legal opinions on the rights embodied in the South African Constitution. Four rulings in particular stand out: that the regulation precluding foreign citizens from being employed as teachers was unfair (1998); that the right to social security in the Constitution vests in everybody and that it was unreasonable and discriminatory to exclude permanent residents from social grants (2004); that it is not permissible for a bank to seize the property of defaulting debtors without a court order (2000); and that the sale in execution of a judgement debt of a person's home without judicial oversight is unconstitutional (2005). These judgments show her unwavering commitment to an imaginative and inclusive human rights jurisprudence.

She was chairperson of the SA Law Reform Commission from 1995 until the end of her third term in 2011.

Throughout her life she has made significant contributions also in civil society organisations. She has been president of Africa Legal Aid, (AFLA) an organisation which provides legal aid and human rights education throughout Africa; served as chairperson of the selection committee of the Press Council of South Africa; chairs the Nelson Mandela Children's Fund, and serves on the Mandela-Rhodes Trust, the South African Institute, and the African Centre for Justice Innovation.

The University honours Justice Mokgoro for her commitment to transformation and social justice, her contributions towards racial and gender equality, the pursuit of human rights and dignity.

DEGREE OF DOCTOR

Matsepo Regina Litsoanelo Kulehile Thesis Title: An analysis of the regulatory principles of functional equivalence and technology neutrality in the context of electronic signatures in the formation of electronic transactions in Lesotho and the SADC region

Regina Kulehile holds BA Law and LLB degrees from the National University of Lesotho and a LLM from UCT. Prior to enrolling for PhD studies in 2013, she was a lecturer at the National University of Lesotho.

Regina Kulehile's thesis focuses on legal regulation of electronic signatures in electronic commerce (e-commerce) in Lesotho and the Southern African Development Community (SADC) region – regulation introduced to promote confidence in their use. She examines international principles for information and communications technology and investigates whether the proposed regulation of Lesotho and SADC electronic signature adequately applies those principles. Comparing Lesotho's and SADC laws with that in the United States of America – a good model for electronic signature regulation regarding compliance with those principles – she finds that the Lesotho laws inadequately comply with the principles because they fail to promote equivalent legal treatment of offline and online signatures, while the SADC law largely complies with the principles and promote equivalence. Consequently, she argues, while Lesotho's laws will not promote e-commerce effectively, states that implement the SADC law will effectively promote e-commerce by enabling e-commerce users to legally and reliably sign electronic contracts with practical electronic signatures and hence to gain confidence in the practice.

In Public Law:
Theresa Rosetta Frantz Thesis Title: Sustainable use and the laws regulating trade in threatened species in South Africa: lessons from the USA

Theresa Frantz completed her BSc, BSc(Hons) and MSc at the University of the Western Cape. She further completed an MPhil in Marine and Environmental Law at UCT. Having had over twenty years' work experience in the environmental sector, she registered as a part-time PhD candidate in 2013.

Theresa Frantz's thesis critically analyses laws regulating sustainable use and trade in threatened species in South Africa and the USA. The backdrop to her study is unsustainably high use levels of plant and animal species and poaching in the illegal wildlife trade which severely impacts species' survival in the wild. Based on her study findings, she makes several recommendations for strengthening South African law, specifically the National Environmental Management: Biodiversity Act and associated legislative tools. They include recommendations for adhering to statutory time-frames, considering a collaborative approach in public participation processes and several improvements in Biodiversity Management Plans for species. She shows that, while South Africa's penalty provisions are stringent, consistency in application by the judiciary is critical; and she recommends that as a responsible global stakeholder for wildlife South Africa must adopt provisions for extraterritorial enforcement of foreign law for sustainable use and trade in threatened species.

Lee-Ann Steenkamp
Thesis Title: ~ From Kyoto to Paris -- a review of South Africa's climate change response with particular emphasis on the Clean Development Mechanism and envisaged transition to the Sustainable Development Mechanism

Lee-Ann Steenkamp holds a BAcc(Hons)

from the University of Stellenbosch and a MCom (Tax) from UCT. She is a registered Master Tax Practitioner (SA) and a senior lecturer at the University of Stellenbosch Business School. She began her PhD studies at UCT in 2016.

Lee-Ann Steenkamp's thesis is positioned in the critical transition period from the Kyoto Protocol to the historic 2015 Paris Agreement on Climate Change (the Paris Agreement). She examines South Africa's response to climate change by reviewing the law, policy and instruments used by government to curb greenhouse gas emissions. In particular, her thesis analyses one of the flexible mechanisms of the Kyoto Protocol, namely the Clean Development Mechanism (CDM), which is tailored specifically for reducing emissions in developing countries. In so-doing she draws lessons for the CDM's apparent successor, the Sustainable Development Mechanism (SDM) of the Paris Agreement. Lee-Ann posits that these instruments will come increasingly under the spotlight in South Africa, as they will, among other things, serve as useful mechanisms to offset the impending carbon tax. She concludes that, despite many similarities between the CDM and SDM, countries have yet to finalise the transition from Kyoto to Paris.

Melani Van Der Merwe

Thesis Title: Energy transitions: the case of South African electric security

Melani van der Merwe has a BA (Criminology, Psychology and Anthropology) from the University of Pretoria and a BSocSci(Hons) and MPhil in Criminal Justice from UCT.

Modern civilisations are highly dependent on electrical security. The exponential growth of renewable energy markets has transformed the generation and distribution of electricity sectors. Theoretical debates have emerged surrounding socio-technical transitions within the energy sector – focused, in particular, on pathways of transition, levers for change and path-dependencies. Melani van der Merwe's thesis, builds on existing scholarship through an exploration of how socio-technical systems are governed. It pays attention to the modalities of 'power giving' and 'power taking' and the associated networks of people and things with their impacts on socio-technical practices, innovations and developmental trajectories. Melani van der Merwe accomplishes this through an analysis of how different actors with different interests engage each other in relation to innovative social and technological pathways.

Welcome, Wamkelekile, Welkom – today is not the end of your relationship with the university but the beginning of a new phase in your continuing relationship with UCT, one that you share with the UCT community of over 100 000 alumni.

Diverse as this community is, the shared experiences of a critical academic ethos and a spectacular campus make for a strong network that has a wide footprint, not only in South Africa, but across the continent and the globe.

We set a great store by our links with our alumni, and indeed the links alumni have with each other. We promise that we will be in touch, and ask you in turn to let us know not only your current contact details but also, from time to time, something of your lives and where you are in your careers.

*Updates can be done on the web – <http://www.uct.ac.za/dad/alumni/update/>
- or by writing to the Alumni Office, UCT, PB X3 Rondebosch 7701 or by contacting us on (27) (21) 650 3746.*

*Your alma mater looks forward to welcoming you back, whether to a public lecture, a leadership forum, your class reunion,
or just an informal call!*
