

SENIOR LECTURER/ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR

Department of Archaeology

Faculty of Science

The Department of Archaeology is a small but vibrant academic department in the Faculty of Science. Departmental teaching and research emphasise the dynamics of human cultural and biological change over time, beginning with the origins of our lineage and extending into the present.

Applications are invited from suitably qualified individuals for a full-time, permanent post at Senior Lecturer or Associate Professor level. We are specifically interested in candidates with expertise in Holocene archaeology and a strong foundation in field-based research. Areas of research interest include, but are not limited to, food producing societies, coastal habitation, and rock art. The successful candidate will be expected, within three years of appointment, to establish a robust research and fieldwork program in South Africa, if one is not already in place.

Requirements for the position across both levels:

- A PhD in the required research field;
- Good research track record;
- Proven capacity to interpret material culture;
- Track record of leading all facets of fieldwork.

Selection at Senior Lecturer Level will be informed by:

- A good record of undergraduate teaching and experience in course and materials development (or equivalent);
- The successful supervision and co-supervision of postgraduate students at Honours, Masters and/or PhD level;
- A steady research output with some evidence of international recognition;
- A track record of obtaining funding for research;
- Experience in departmental-level and possibly faculty-level administration (or equivalent).

Selection at Associate Professor Level will be informed by:

- An extensive record of quality undergraduate teaching and clear evidence of curriculum development at both course and programme level;
- A track record of graduated Honours, Masters and PhD students;
- A productive record of research outputs which are having a significant international impact;
- A consistently good track record of obtaining funding for research;
- A good reputation for leadership at faculty/university level (or equivalent).

Responsibilities:

- University teaching and developing undergraduate as well as postgraduate courses in the Department, including field courses;
- Recruiting and supervising Honours, Masters and Doctoral students;
- Pursuing an active research programme and raising the required funding;
- Course convening, department, faculty and depending on level, university administrative duties;
- Sustained academic citizenship, including promoting the university's values of an inclusive and diverse community; • Contributing to the well-being of the department.

The annual cost of employment for 2023, including benefits, is:

- Senior Lecturer: R1 027 040.00
- Associate Professor: R1 232 882.00
