

JUNIOR RESEARCH FELLOW

(3- Year Contract)

CENTRE FOR ENVIRONMENTAL AND OCCUPATIONAL HEALTH RESEARCH, SCHOOL OF PUBLIC HEALTH FACULTY OF HEALTH SCIENCES

The Centre for Environmental and Occupational Research (CEOHR) has been a university recognised research centre / unit since 1994. The Centre has for some years arguably concentrated the most substantial concentration of skills in clinical occupational medicine and occupational epidemiology research in the country and host the SA-Swiss SARChI in Global Environmental Health since 2015. A Junior Research Fellow (JRF) is seen as the ideal opportunity to enhance the Centre's capacity to investigate gene environmental interactions in relation to chemical toxicity.

The JRF, will be expected to produce mainly research output but also engage in teaching, socially responsive activities and, where appropriate, participate in departmental, faculty and committee work and administration.

We invite applications for the above-mentioned position under the mentorship of Prof Aqiel Dalvie and Prof. Leslie London in the Centre for Environmental and Occupational Health Research, Department of Public Health, Faculty of Health Sciences. This position is funded by the University of Cape Town's Research Committee. We are seeking an emerging academic who has completed 2 years of postdoctoral research experience but has not as yet had the opportunity to work independently/lead a research project.
