DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCIAL LAW

(Including the Institute of Development and Labour Law, the Centre for Comparative Law in Africa, the Shipping Law Unit and the Intellectual Property Unit)

Head of Department: Associate Professor Caroline Ncube

Departmental Profile

The Department of Commercial Law is the biggest department in the Law Faculty in terms of both staff complement and student numbers. Several of its academic staff members hold doctorate degrees whilst a few others are currently working on their doctorate degrees. In addition, a number of academic staff members are working on new books or on new editions of established works. All of this enhances the department’s scholarly achievements, as evidenced by the publications listed below. The Department now has three NRF rated researchers.

The Department has an increasing number of PhD and LLM by dissertation students and teaches most of the students who are taking the LLM by coursework and the Postgraduate Diplomas in Law. It graduated its first cohort of professional masters degree graduates at the end of 2014.

In the LLB programme the Department teaches compulsory courses in Corporation Law, Commercial Transactions Law and Labour Law. It offers 14 optional courses to final year students. The Department also offers specialised commercial law courses to nearly 2600 students from other faculties.

There are four research and teaching units which form part of the Department: the Institute of Development and Labour Law, the Centre for Comparative Law in Africa, the Shipping Law unit and the Intellectual Property Unit.

CENTRE FOR COMPARATIVE LAW IN AFRICA

Director: Dr A. Ordor

Centre profile

The Centre for Comparative Law in Africa (CCLA) was established in 2011 to promote the study of comparative law and draw on the strengths of comparative methodology to research into the multifaceted field of law in Africa. The Centre presents an opportunity to develop a discipline that lends itself to optimal application in the pluralistic legal frameworks within which life is lived in Africa. In its mission to contribute to the development of comparative law in Africa, the strategy of the CCLA is to establish the field at UCT, build capacity in it across the continent through academic programmes, apply comparative law expertise in consultancies and disseminate new knowledge in comparative law in Africa through conferences, publications and professional networks. Its location within the Department of Commercial Law recognises the centrality of comparative law to on-going efforts at economic integration on the African continent. The CCLA offers an LLM and a postgraduate diploma in Comparative Law and conducts research on a variety of themes that apply comparative methodology. Currently the Centre is involved in a collaborative research project on mineral law and policy in three southern African countries (South Africa, Namibia and Zambia) under the UCT PERC Africa Knowledge Project as well as customary law development in Somaliland. The CCLA offers support for Africa-focused doctoral research and also undertakes consultancies from institutions in the public and private sectors.

SHIPPING LAW UNIT

Associate Professor and Head:
Associate Professor G. Bradfield

Unit profile

The Shipping Law Unit has been in operation since the beginning of 1993. The Unit was set up within the Department of Commercial Law to accommodate part-time and full-time studies in Shipping Law at higher postgraduate level, and to support the Maritime Law option offered to Final Level LLB students. The Shipping Law Unit provides postgraduate tuition and research in Admiralty law and practice and in all private law aspects of the law relating to the sea and ships. It serves as an information and advice centre to the shipping industry, and monitors developments in maritime law and policy in South Africa and abroad. The Unit co-operates closely with the Institute of Marine and Environmental Law which handles the public law elements of the Law of the Sea and related subjects.

INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY UNIT

Director: Dr T. Schönwetter

Unit profile

The Intellectual Property Unit (IP Unit) was set up in 2007 as a centre for policy research and teaching in intellectual property law. Intellectual property is a key determinant of human development, economic growth and competitiveness; and intellectual property rules impact on various public policy areas including health, research and development, bio-diversity, clean technologies, food security, and education. Important issues range from the way in which we access and share knowledge to strategies how to commercialise inventions and avoid misappropriation. The IP Unit comprises Dr Tobias Schönwetter, A/Prof. Caroline Ncube and Ms Lee-Ann Tong, two administrators (Nan Warner and Phyllis Webb) as well as a varying number of soft-funded research collaborators, visiting scholars, fellows and visiting students from Africa, Europe and North America. The IP Unit seeks to add a credible African voice to the global debates concerning the link between intellectual property, innovation, development and public policy. The IP Unit offers PhD supervision, LLM and fellowship programmes, hosts regular stakeholder workshops and seminars and is involved in numerous national and international research projects. IP Unit members are involved in various national, regional and international networks and, the unit is the centre of two of the largest intellectual property networks on the African continent, namely the Open A.I.R. (African Innovation Research, www.openair.org.za) network and Creative Commons Africa (www.creativecommons.org).

CENTRE OF CRIMINOLOGY

Acting Director: Julie Berg
Chair: Professor C. Shearing and Prof M Shaw

Centre Profile

The Centre is a niche research unit within the Faculty of Law at the University of Cape Town. The South African National Research Foundation (NRF) Chair of Security and Justice, a South African Research Chairs Initiative of the Department of Science and Technology and the NRF is hosted by the Law Faculty at the University of Cape Town. Professor Clifford Shearing, held the chair until August 2014. Prof. Mark Shaw took up this position with effect from 1 September 2014.

During the course of 2014 the work of the Centre was focused around some of the most pertinent challenges facing South Africa and Africa more generally within the overall context of an increasingly globalised world. This work included a strong emphasis on research in: (1) environmental risk and security; (2) developments and challenges for policing, both public, private and community driven, and reforms; (3) organised crime and illicit trafficking in South Africa and Africa, including with a focus on the evolution of criminal networks in fragile states and their impact on governance, democracy, livelihoods and the environment; (4) criminal justice policy challenges, with an emphasis on developing country contexts; and (5) violent crime, with particular attention to its impact on youth and women.

The work of the Centre recognises the critical importance of addressing safety issues as a core challenge of holistic development. To do this requires stretching the boundaries of criminology in ways that will enable it to recognise and respond to the changing international, regional and local landscape of risk.

Institute of Marine and Environmental Law

Director: Professor Jan Glazewski

Institute Profile

The Institute of Marine and Environmental Law undertakes research, teaching and consultancy in the fields of marine and environmental law both at the international level and in the context of Southern Africa. It also participates in multi-disciplinary projects in collaboration with other specialists in marine and environmental subjects. 2013 again saw members of the Institute continuing with research in several specialist areas, with two of the highlights being Professor Feris and Professor Paterson delivering their inaugural lectures titled ‘A sense of place: New frontiers in the law’ and ‘Sitting on the fence as it gets cut from below: Co-managing conservation and land reform agendas in South Africa’s protected areas’ respectively. Professor Glazewski spent much of the year working with fellow authors to update 14 of the 26 chapters in the loose leaf edition of his book, Environmental Law in South Africa. In addition to continuing with the PescaDolus Project, where he is working in collaboration with the Norwegian Ministry of Fisheries as well as NMMU on trans-boundary fisheries crime, Professor Glazewski convened an international seminar on ‘Proposed Shale Gas Extraction/Fracking in the Karoo’ during October 2014. Professor Feris, who was on sabbatical in the first half of the year, continued her work on sanitation and also participated in a Water Research Commission Research Project on water governance. Professor Paterson continued with his research in the area of protected areas law and governance, and in the capacity as lead author of the IUCN Environmental Law Centre’s Protected Areas Law and Governance Project, convened several workshops at the World Parks Congress held in Sydney in November 2014. His research in this area also led to the publication of several papers and chapters on protected areas governance, conservation and land reform, indigenous peoples’ rights in protected areas and connectivity. Micha Young, the final fulltime member of the Institute, published several papers on marine spatial planning and international environmental law.

DEMOCRATIC GOVERNANCE & RIGHTS UNIT

Director: Associate Professor R. Calland

Unit Profile

The Democratic Governance and Rights Unit conducts applied and comparative research in the field of judicial governance with a particular interest in judicial appointments and gender equality and diversity in the judiciary and in the legal profession in both South Africa and the region. We provide bespoke research support to judges in the SADC region. We are a member of the international free access to law movement through our SAFLII and AfricanLII projects. We publish the largest free-access collection of legal materials from southern Africa and we are a leader in supporting and providing free access to Law on the continent.

2014 saw Chris Oxtoby and Tabeth Masengu presenting their research findings at a number of conferences – hosting a panel discussion at the International Association of Women Judges AGM and presenting a paper at Oxford Human rights conference in Rwanda in May amongst others. Chris Oxtoby also participated in our exchange programme with Södertörn University in Sweden, teaching comparative constitutional law for three weeks to undergraduate students in Stockholm. Tabeth convened a number of legal sector workshops around the country which interrogated gender issues in the sector and Chris concluded research for a monograph on separation of powers and the Constitutional Court and presenting his findings at a workshop.

In September we hosted the annual International Law via the Internet Conference (LVI) in partnership with Kenya Law with participants from over 35 countries. Hosting the LVI in Africa provided a unique opportunity to combine advocacy for the now well-developed Free Access to Law Movement in Africa with practical models for implementing legal information technologies to further promote and increase the impact of open access to law and, consequently, greater access to justice. The conference tailored its plenary and parallel sessions to the challenges faced by the government, the judiciary, academic institutions, legal practitioners, and citizens in utilising open access law in Africa in particular, and the developing world more generally.

We convened a forum for South African Judges in November which explored the theme of pro-poor judging and piloted our Court Intern programme in Malawi and Namibia. This is a partnership project with Oxford University’s pro bono Public group through which we place post-graduate students as interns in superior courts. It was well received by the courts and will be further rolled out in 2015. Our ‘virtual research assistant” project in the region has really gained traction and provides great opportunities for post graduate students to gain practical research experience whilst providing high quality research support to judges around the region. Students at UCT worked on 9 projects for judges – from producing legal opinions and comparative research reports to the provision of articles and other background resources.

On a technical level, we started development of an offline legal resource “Pocket Law” which will be updatable when there is access to the internet – this will be rolled out in 2015 as a research tool for students, judges and practitioners in the region.

CENTRE FOR LAW AND SOCIETY

Director: Associate Professor D. Smythe

Centre Profile

With a primary focus on producing excellent empirical studies of law in context, based on participatory methodologies and collaborative partnerships, CLS is committed to sound research underpinning evidence-based advocacy on critical legal and social issues. In recent years we have expanded our areas of focus, retaining the emphasis on participation, knowledge-sharing, and capacity-building as central tenets of our Centre's scholarly approach. In 2009 the Rural Women's Action Research Programme (RWAR) was established within the Centre, with the objective of challenging government policies and laws that undermine the citizenship rights of the 18 million people living within them and set the former homelands apart from the rest of South Africa as zones of chiefly sovereignty. We are committed to foregrounding the understandings, initiatives and expertise of people living in rural areas in informing law and policy. To this end we support rural leaders to make direct submissions to parliament and engage directly in policy debates. We engage in ongoing conversations with our rural partners in order to develop joint strategies for change. We have made a significant contribution to shifting academic discourse in the area of rural power relations and citizenship rights and in creating a space for community-based groups and organisations to challenge the government’s approach to land reform, traditional courts and the elevation of chiefly interests at the expense of the citizenship rights of ordinary people. Our work has also contributed to extensive media coverage and political debate about these issues, and we have provided extensive research and conceptual support in relation to a number of cases in the Constitutional Court.

In 2014 we launched a postgraduate Programme in Criminology, Law and Society, in partnership with the Centre for Criminology, to train the next generation of scholars concerned with issues of law and society in Africa.

REFUGEE RIGHTS UNIT

Unit Director: Ms. F Khan

Unit Profile

The Refugee Rights Unit is a fully independent Unit, with four main components: the Unit's Refugee Law Clinic provides direct legal services to thousands of refugees and asylum seekers in the Western Cape each year; the Unit conducts applied research in refugee law and related topics; it teaches refugee law to undergraduate law and masters’ students within the Department of Public Law; and, it undertakes a significant amount of targeted advocacy and training of government officials, the judiciary, civil society partners and refugee communities.

The close relationship between the Refugee Law Clinic’s practice the Unit’s teaching of Refugee and Immigration Law courses to LLB and LLM students, and the Unit’s research is a unique aspect of the Unit’s work. The Refugee Law Clinic provides the Unit with a close link to the practical application of refugee law in South Africa and therefore directly informs and supports the Unit’s teaching activities and research outputs. Students often engage with the most current issues facing refugees and asylum seekers in South Africa, including those involved in the strategic litigations undertaken by the Refugee Law Clinic. Students are also encouraged to volunteer at the Refugee Law Clinic in order to gain practical experience and fulfil community service requirements. The Unit’s teaching component includes the direct supervision of undergraduate and graduate level research work in the field of refugee and immigration law.

The Working Paper Series, (www.refugeerights.uct.ac.za/research/working_papers/) publishes the research reports of the Refugee Rights Unit, occasional papers of the Unit members and versions of some of the papers presented by the Refugee Rights Unit members. A key focus of the Working Papers is the promotion of the rights of refugees in South Africa and the global South.

The Refugee Rights Unit remains not only committed to directly assisting refugees and asylum seekers but also in teaching and engaging in research which can be used to promote and further the law in this area and as an advocacy tool in the future. The Unit has edited and written a Refugee Law textbook titled Refugee Law in South Africa. The textbook was published by Juta & Co Ltd in 2014 and is available for purchase on the Juta Website. Members of staff also write refugee law related articles for the purpose of publishing in peer-reviewed journals.
